Report on stop-and-frisk shows low conviction rate

High cost. The report by the NY attorney general said there was a low conviction rate for people arrested using the method.

Attorney General Eric Schneiderman released a report on Thursday analyzing how effective the police practice of stop-and-frisk is, based on data from the NYPD and the office of Court Administration.

The report looked at the number of stops that lead to arrests, and the number of arrests that lead to convictions. It looked at approximately 150,000 arrests out of 2.4 million stops between 2009 and 2012.

According to the A.G.'s report, 3 percent of those arrests lead to convictions, and .01 percent to convictions of a violent crime. .03 of those cases resulted in jail sentences of more than 30 days.

Schneiderman highlighted the city's litigation costs due to stop-and-frisk: In 2009, the NYPD paid out the largest legal settlement of any city agency for the first time in three decades.

The report also looked at harm incurred by arrestees, even for misdemeanors.

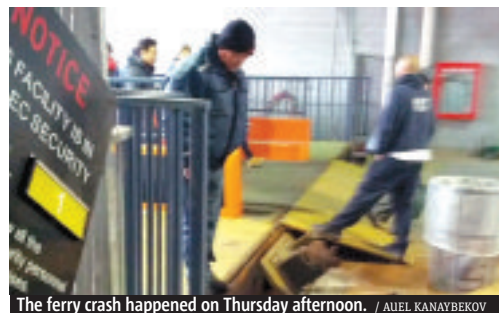

People who are arrested, even if they are only charged with misdemeanors, face "collateral consequences," regardless of the ultimate outcome of the case. Their lives are affected in myriad ways, from loss of employment, housing or immigration status to becoming ineligible for student loans.

Ferry crashes at Whitehall terminal

The ferry crash happened on Thursday afternoon. / AUEL KANAYBEKOV

Staten Island Ferry riders got an unexpected jolt Thursday afternoon when the vessel they were riding slammed into a Manhattan ferry terminal.

Officials confirmed the ferry had departed from Whitehall terminal and reached as far as Governor's Island when the captain discovered some sort of mechanical issue.

Officials were unsure of the specifics of the issue.

The captain turned around and headed back to Whitehall terminal, warning the passengers to brace for impact, police said.

The ferry made a "hard landing" into the dock, causing damage to the dock, police said.

The fire department said they received a call at 3:10 p.m., though the caller said the ferry had bumped the dock some time earlier.

Fire department personnel were still on scene about an hour later, though officials said no one had reported any injuries or requested medical attention, and nobody had fallen overboard.

Foiled attack

Police hunt would-be rapist in Williamsburg

Police are looking for a man they said attempted to rape a woman on a Brooklyn street last week before a witness thwarted the attack.

A 27-year-old woman was walking along Graham Avenue towards Scholes Street in Williamsburg about 4:20 a.m. when the suspect grabbed her.

Cops said the suspect threw her to the ground and attempted to rape her.

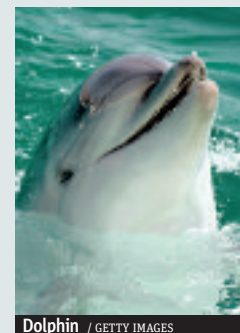

Police said a witness stopped to intervene as the man tried to take off the woman's clothes. The suspect fled. ANNA SANDERS

Grow. The mayor planted a tree, completing 30 acres of new parkland.

Scooping a handful of dirt with a shovel and dumping it at the base of a skinny ginkgo tree, Mayor Michael Bloomberg helped plant the final piece in 30 acres of new parkland on Governors Island Tuesday.

"At the beginning of our administration, Governors Island was 172 acres of underutilized space," Bloomberg said, adding it is now "a spectacular, one-of-a-kind destination, a place to experience the beauty and history of New York harbor."

Planting the tree marked the completion of Governors Island Park's first phase of construction. Opening next May, the new parkland includes public art, fields, play areas and 50 hammocks.

The ginkgo was also the 800,000th tree in the Million Trees NYC initiative, aiming to dot the city with a million trees by 2015.

"Trees help the economy, they help the neighborhood, they clean the air — but they make everybody happy," he said.

New report

More graduating high school students are college-ready

More New York City students who are graduating high school are college-ready, according to what could be the last round of letter grades given to city schools.

The Bloomberg administration announced the seventh annual progress reports, which award letter grades to schools based on students' performance and attendance, as well as surveys of parents, students and teachers.

Mayor-elect Bill de Blasio has said that he would abolish the letter-grading system, saying that it is not a strong indicator of how New York public schools are performing. LAURA SHIN

Curriculum

Schools get $1.6 million donation

AT&T will donate $1.6 million to help expand software engineering curriculum for students at 12 city schools, Mayor Michael Bloomberg has announced.

It will help fund the launch of a new enrichment program for ninth graders, paid summer internships for high school students and boot camp events such as hackathons and app challenges, according to the announcement.

"Over the last decade we've shifted the landscape of public education in New York City by creating hundreds of new schools and innovative programs to prepare students for college and careers," Bloomberg said. LAURA SHIN

Parents of Allison Lao plead for traffic safety

Tragic warning.

The little girl was killed a month ago in Queens.

In a heart-wrenching four-minute speech at a march, the parents of a little girl killed just one month ago pleaded with city drivers to exercise greater care.

Allison Lao, 3, was killed by an SUV while crossing the street with her grandmother in Jackson Heights, Queens.

At the Three Children Too Many march for traffic safety on Tuesday night, Allison's mother, Amy Tam, and father, Hsi-Pei Liao, spoke of their loss and tried to appeal to drivers.

The driver who hit Allison was turning left through a crosswalk.

Police gave him two tickets: one for failing to yield to a pedestrian and one for failing to exercise due care.

The toddler, her weeping mother said, "paid the death penalty for crossing the street."

"It's unbelievable that the driver's penalty was two tickets," her mother cried.

Allison's father made a desperate plea for drivers to realize their "enormous responsibility."

"Please, before you get behind the wheel, realize that the machine that you're about to operate can kill people," he urged.

DANIELLE TCHOLAKIAN
danielle.tcholakian@metro.us

For the record

Straight facts

Traffic safety advocates have complained that media reports suggested the little girl darted into traffic. But that was untrue: The 3-year-old was in the crosswalk, with a green light, "hand-in-hand with grandma."

"Allie was behaving exactly the way you would want your own 3-year-old to while crossing the street," her mother sobbed.

"This driver," she continued, "instead of yielding to a toddler and her grandma, made a conscious decision to muscle his way through the crosswalk."

Typhoon aftermath. US carrier unloads Philippine relief goods

A U.S. aircraft carrier "strike group" started unloading food and water to the typhoon-ravaged central Philippines on Thursday, as President Benigno Aquino faced mounting pressure to speed up the distribution of supplies.

While relief efforts picked up, local authorities began burying the dead — an important, if grim, milestone for a city shredded by one of the world's most powerful typhoons and the tsunami-like wall of seawater believed to have killed thousands.

"There are still bodies on the road," said Alfred Romualdez, mayor of Tacloban, a city of 220,000 people reduced to rubble in worst-hit Leyte province. "It's scary. There is a request from a community to come and collect bodies. They say it's five or 10. When we get there, it's 40." Many petrol station owners whose businesses were spared have refused to reopen, leaving little fuel for trucks needed to move supplies and medical teams around the devastated areas nearly a week after Typhoon Haiyan struck. REUTERS

BLAME ON YOU

Remember the joke, "How do you make an old Catholic woman curse?" "Have another one shout, 'Bingo!'"

With the rollout of Obamacare being widely derided as a train wreck, it's the Republicans now shouting "Bingo." In other words, "I told you so."

And it's the Democrats in D.C. these days who are doing the cursing. All you have to do is mention Republicans and Obamacare in the same breath.

"They hate it!" Democrats will roar. "They want to destroy it! They're out to bring down this president and all he has accomplished!" At that point they usually wander off down Pennsylvania Avenue with their heads spinning.

They're right, of course. Republicans have been broadly opposed to President Obama's signature legislation since the start.

Republicans have offered endless proposals to defund, deconstruct and dismantle it. And they've failed over and over again. For all their bluster, they've been unable to force any significant changes.

And that is a problem for Democrats, because it means whatever is wrong with Obamacare belongs to their party alone, no matter how much they may grouse about the GOP.

Oh sure, some Republican-ruled states have been less than cooperative, some insurers have heaved curveballs and the folks who designed the website ... well, you know.

But whenever anyone warned about the possibility of such setbacks (even, I might add, when those warnings came from politically neutral analysts) the White House and Democratic leaders pretty much dismissed the speakers as naysayers.

If the Democrats had allowed the Republicans even a few minor tweaks to the program, they could have had a fighting chance of portraying this as a bipartisan problem.

But they didn't, so the Republicans can hoot with impunity from the sidelines while the Democrats alone try to wrestle this bear.

To be sure, Obamacare may yet turn out to be a rousing success.

But if it fails, that failure will land almost exclusively on Democrats no matter how hard they point a finger of blame at others.

Democrats ignored probably the greatest lesson Bill Clinton ever taught: Be grateful for your opponents, because they — more than friends — will show you where your ideas are weak.

Study. Leaving the light on results in poor sleep quality

Falling asleep in the glow of the TV or leaving a light on next to the bed can affect brain activity levels and lead to poor quality sleep, according to the authors of a new study.

"Our study showed that even a low light interferes with good sleep by inducing more light sleep, less deep sleep and more frequent micro-arousals during sleep," which is a new finding, Dr. Seung-Bong Hong said.

Hong, from the Samsung Medical Center of Sungkyunkwan University School of Medicine in Seoul, South Korea, is the senior author of the report.

The researchers had 10 healthy people sleep for two nights while machines assessed changes in their heart rate, breathing and brain/muscle activity.

The first night, there was no artificial light in the room. REUTERS

'Widowhood effect' strongest during first three months

Research. Family and friends can help a surviving spouse by being supportive and attentive.

When a husband or wife dies, the surviving spouse faces a higher risk of dying over the next few months as well, according to a new report.

Previous studies have looked at the so-called widowhood effect. But it wasn't completely clear how long the effect lasts.

"The widowhood question is interesting because it is ubiquitous. At some point or the other, one partner will die, leaving the other, and this will happen to everyone regardless of class, caste, socioeconomic status," Dr. S. V. Subramanian told Reuters Health in an email. He worked on the study at the Harvard School of Public Health in Boston.

"It's possible it's a grief-related mechanism, or that providing care for the sick spouse causes illness in the surviving spouse, or that, as one's spouse gets sicker, the surviving spouse stops taking care of their own health," Subramanian said.

The study

There were 2,912 deaths during the study period. Of those, 2,373 were among married people who left a widow or widower behind. The other 539 deaths were among people who had become widows and widowers themselves.

For the new analysis, the researchers looked at data from the University of Michigan Health and Retirement Study, which surveys more than 26,000 Americans over age 50 every two years.

Widows and widowers were more likely to die than people whose spouses were still living, on average. The effect was strongest during the first three months after a spouse's death, when they had a 66 percent increased chance of dying. REUTERS

Insurers worryObamacare fix for canceled health policies could raise costs

President Barack Obama's fix for canceled health plans could "destabilize" the insurance market and lead to higher costs for consumers without further steps, America's Health Insurance Plans, an industry trade group, said on Thursday.

"Changing the rules after health plans have already met the requirements of the [Obamacare] law could destabilize the market and result in higher premiums," AHIP President Karen Ignagni said in a statement.

Obama

President Barack Obama bowed to political pressure from his fellow Democrats on Thursday and announced a plan to let insurers renew for one year the health plans for Americans whose policies would be otherwise canceled due to Obamacare.

The administrative fix offered by Obama would allow insurers to offer certain health plans in 2014 that do not meet the minimum requirements of the health reform law, but require the companies to spell out how the policies are substandard and what alternatives are available.

Before the law went into effect, Obama had repeatedly promised that Americans who liked their health insurance plans could keep them under the Affordable Care Act, commonly known as Obamacare.

The law included a grandfathering provision that allowed insurers to maintain policies that did not meet new minimum coverage levels required by Obamacare, as long as the policies were created before the law was enacted in 2010. REUTERS

Boehner says Obamacare administrative fixes won't work

U.S. House of Representatives Speaker John Boehner said on Thursday that he does not believe that President Barack Obama can fix problems with his health care reform law with administrative changes and it should simply be scrapped.

"The only way to fully protect the American people is to scrap this law once and for all," Boehner told a news conference.

Microsoft's new facility has tactics to battle hacking

Cybercrime. The software giant takes the group approach to fighting hackers.

inside the 16,800-square-foot, high-security facility combines a wide array of tactics that have worked the best: massive data gathering and analysis, gumshoe detective work, high-level diplomacy and creative lawyering.

The maker of the most popular computer operating system in the world is launching a new strategy against criminal hackers by bringing together security engineers, digital forensics experts and lawyers trained in fighting software pirates under one roof at its new Cybercrime Center.

Microsoft Corp.'s expanded Digital Crimes Unit

The new approach, which launched Thursday, is the latest attempt to close the gap created in the past decade as criminal hackers innovated in technology and business methods to stay ahead of adversaries mired in the slow-moving world of international law enforcement.

The center features a lab for dissecting malicious software samples that is

Google wins scanning lawsuit

Google Inc., on Thursday won dismissal of a long-running lawsuit by authors who accused the Internet search company of digitally copying millions of books for an online library without permission.

U.S. Circuit Judge Denny Chin in Manhattan accepted Google's argument that its scanning of more than 20 million books, and making "snippets" of text available online, constituted "fair use" under U.S. copyright law. REUTERS

Trolls. Twitter swarm sends bank running

JPMorgan Chase & Co. canceled a question-and-answer session on Twitter with a veteran investment banker after being flooded with insults, highlighting the risks companies take as they experiment with social media marketing.

"Bad idea! Back to the drawing board," spokesman Brian Marchiony said by email after the event with bank executive Jimmy Lee was called off.

JPMorgan last week asked users of the popular microblogging site to send questions marked with the hashtag #AskJPM in advance of the session.

Few questions appeared until Wednesday afternoon when responses started piling in. Some users simply made fun of the bank's attempt to use social media, but many others chose to insult executives. REUTERS

Day 10: Temp enjoys cocktails with The Danimal

It was after 5 p.m. and I was getting ready to call a cab when a flower delivery arrived — a jumbo tropical parade float that put my mind immediately to rum drinks.

WAVEBREAK MEDIA

The Danimal passed through as I was opening the envelope. "Who's that for?" he asked.

I opened it and we both read it at once: To most beautiful temp for glorious mcfunburry dinner. return from china very soonly."

I wasn't sure how to play this.

"Shannon, is there something I should know?"

"Huh?" God, not the mating panda thing again. "No!"

"That's not what I meant."

"What did you mean?"

"I saw you and Xu Junior yakking it up in the parking lot. Don't think I believe the fortune cookie English thing for a minute."

"Oh."

"Yes, oh."

I tried casually to put on my jacket. Danimal said, "Come for drinks with me. It's not a pickup. Yes, my wife's in Florida getting her lips done, but you know that. I just don't want to go home yet, not after today."

"Where's Andy Kimura?"

"We hate each other. I don't care where he is. It's one of the reasons we're selling."

A mother lode of potential office gossip was too big to ignore. "OK, but I don't go with married guys. Period."

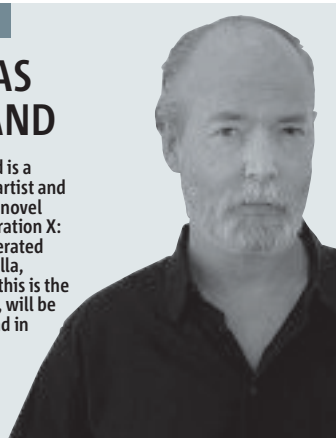

"It's not about that. Let's go to that bar beside McFunbury's."

"The Executive Privilege Short-Term Corporate Lodging Good Time Experience?"

"That's the place. 'The Priv.' We have a deal with them."

Drinks at The Priv started badly. Danimal guzzled a double scotch and I got stupid on a rum punch. He got philosophical about cars, the way guys do.

"Kevin's Mustang depressed the crap out of me. I looked at it and all I thought of was how it's too late to fix whatever bit of the economy is left after having shipped it all off to China. Think of Michigan: 10 million primates needing 2,500 calories a day sitting on a cold rock in the middle of the North American continent, with nothing to do all day. A recipe for disaster. Bartender!"

More drinks. More philosophy. "Shannon, Detroit is our existential boogieman. Detroit forces us to ponder the meaning of being alive: We wake up, we do something, we go to sleep, we repeat it about 22,000 more times — and then we die."

I looked across the bar: Sarah and Kyle were coming in and they'd obviously just been ... frisky with each other.

Danimal was being maudlin: "I don't care if you're spying on TWK for the Chinese. I just want the old system back."

Dan and Sarah locked eyes. So did Kyle and I.

"Sarah?" said Danimal. "This place is our place. You brought someone else here?"

"What about you, Romeo?"

Kyle looked at me: "Shannon?"

"It's not what you th—" I turned to Danimal, "Spying for the Chinese? Are you nuts?"

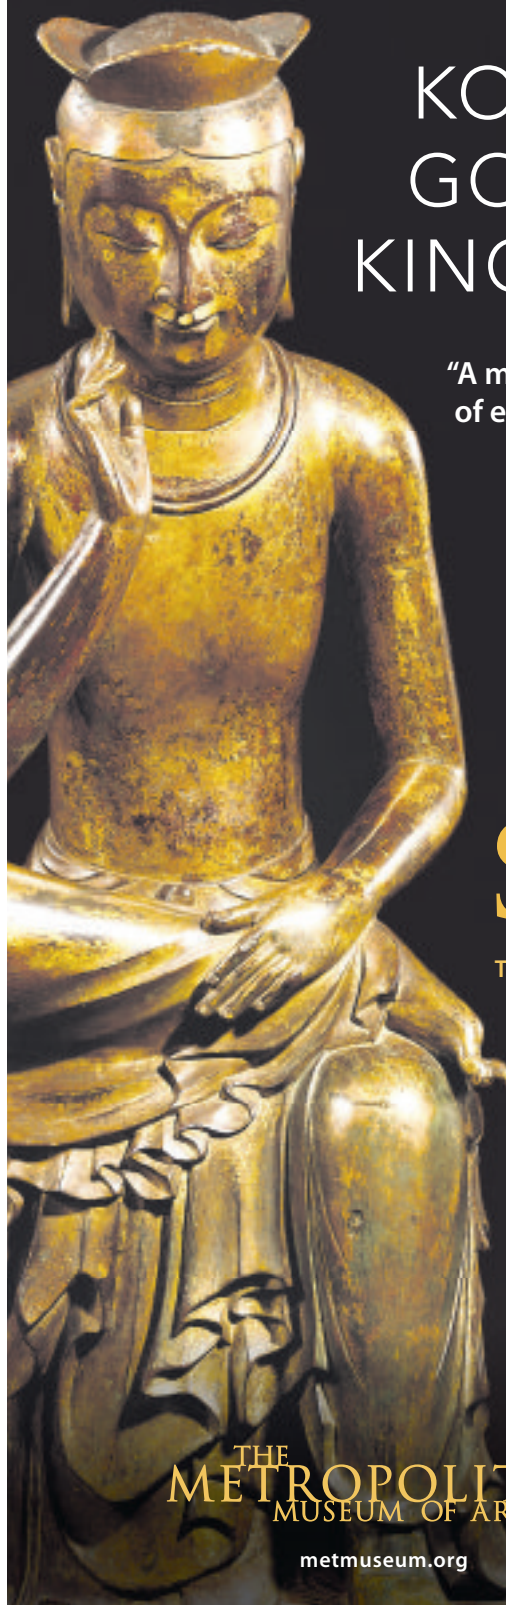

Caramba, what a mess.

Two more ways to live the movies

1 SECOND SCREEN LIVE. "Bring your iPad with you to the movie," reads a poster for Disney's re-release of "The Little Mermaid." You can sing along and play games with help from the "second screen." It's for film fans "open to the communal experience" and worked well for "A Nightmare Before Christmas." (Disney.com)

2 THE FILM LOCATION TOUR. See Amelie's apartment or the bookshop from "Notting Hill," along with other film locations from New York to California to Italy — 20 total. The $300,000 price tag includes airfare, hotels and guided tours. (VeryFirstTo.com)

Live the dream.

Why just watch a movie when you can star in one? Meet the companies ready to cast you in a "live experience."

You're walking down a dark metallic corridor, the disorienting sounds of machinery, attack alarms and soldiers in lockstep blaring from the room ahead. A minute ago, you were some hipster after work, three beers in. But now you're wearing a jumpsuit on what appears to be, as you turn the corner, a massive spaceship. You see marines in zero-G gear, a decontamination room and a massive recon vehicle 20 feet tall, surrounded by dry ice. It's like something out of "Alien." No, rather, this IS "Alien!" Or, more specifically, the "Alien" spinoff "Prometheus." And you're starring in it. Your living movie has just begun.

The above describes an event last year thrown by Secret Cinema, a group run by Future Cinema, the British company that calls itself a "live cinema." It's part of a trend of immersive experiences around the world. The goal is participation, and Hollywood is listening: Anything that peels you away from Netflix — and gets you to pay more — tends to do that.

"I see it as riding the edge of culture," Future Cinema founder Fabien Riggall told Wired last year. He has since declined interview requests, for fear he's revealed too much — Secret Cinema generates buzz by keeping the films themselves secret, hence the name.

The future of cinema

STARRING YOU

Imagine being in "Ghostbusters." Actually, you no longer have to imagine it; you can live it! / FUTURE CINEMA

By the numbers

What Future Cinema reportedly made on its "Shawshank Redemption" event

But we've been! After buying a ticket online ($60 and up), you're sent mysterious instructions about where to go and what costume to wear, but nothing more. You roam the spaces, touching, drinking, playing games and interacting with actors, who might send you on missions (or devour you, if it's "Prometheus"). Then you finally watch the movie.

"Prometheus" earned the company $1.1 million and had the blessing of director Ridley Scott, who introduced the film (via video) and donated props. The company's "Shawshank Redemption" experience reportedly raked in $2.7 million. Yeah, people paid to pretend to be in jail.

Despite its cool cred, Future Cinema wasn't the first to be so bold. That honor goes to Punchdrunk, a British theater company around since 2000. Their current productions include "Sleep No More," an interactive adaptation of "Macbeth," which has played in Boston and New York, and "The Drowned Man" in London, in which you wander through several warehouse floors of a noirish Los Angeles — a living, breathing, sepia-toned "Grand Theft Auto," where every fairground, movie studio and bedroom has been constructed to the finest detail, right down to old bottles in the medicine cabinets.

"We want to almost place the audience in an atmosphere where they're witnessing living films," says Felix Barrett, Punchdrunk's artistic director. "When we're directing it we talk about wide shots and close-ups, and we encourage each of the performers to imagine that they're heroes of their own movie."

The result is a choose-your-own adventure: You could end

What's next

Think globally

Future Cinema is planning a worldwide expansion, having just attempted events in New York, London and Greece. And Barrett plans to take his fake world experience into the real one. Imagine this: "You book a holiday. You get a date, a locker and a key for the airport, and you open your locker and you find out where you're flying to. You're given one instruction — say, a cafe to go to — and then the show has begun and it's a completely surreal world."

up following the town drunk for an hour as he gets kicked out of the local diner; or watch the narrative, an adaptation of Georg Buchner's "Woyzeck," that trails from room to room; or end up at the bar, enjoying a burlesque performance and happily missing the "real show."

"We want to make theater dangerous again so that you're out of your comfort zone," Barrett says.

The future of parties

The top 5 trends popping up—in one case, literally

Dining darkly

Dark Dining Projects bring the most exquisite foods to different New York locations, vision not included.

Camaje (85 MacDougal St.) has featured Dark Dining since 2007, in which diners are blindfolded and given no details about the four-course menu. The goal is to rely on and stimulate other senses, aided by musicians and a professional tap dancer. You might not be able to see the dance moves but you'll hear them around.

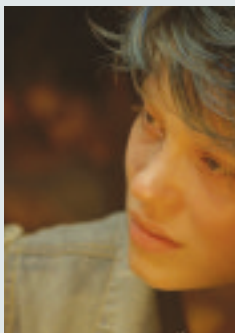

Pop-up spots

Pop-up parties have sprung up in places from NYC Laundromats to bridges to avoid complaints, crackdowns and predictability. Something different? 305 Fitness hosts bimonthly pop-up workout parties in lofts and nightclubs all around New York. While you still get the live DJ and heavy bass, the bartender here will be serving up smoothies.

Movie + hot tub

Hot Tub Cinema isn't stateside yet. It's a big thing in East London, but if you go to the site www.hottubcinema.com and start petitioning, the trend could come to NYC. Other aquatic fun can be had locally at The Pool Deck at the Empire Hotel (44 W. 63 St.). It's a 150-person rooftop bar with cabanas, mini fridges and flat screens. You need a room key, but for $10, anyone can get into the bar and pool at the Bar at Grace Hotel (125 W. 45th St.).

Dinner + movie

Nitehawk Cinema (136 Metropolitan Ave., Brooklyn) doesn't offer dinner and a movie, it offers dinner for the movie. Alongside staple food items and drinks, the Nitehawk team creates dishes inspired by the films they play. Blue cheese fondue for "Blue is the Warmest Color?" Sounds great.

Pingpong it

Pingpong suddenly got cool—we promise. At SPiN New York (48 E. 23rd St., 212-982-8802), trendy design, 17 courts, and a full bar and restaurant may have you suggesting table tennis this Friday night.

J.J. Abrams looks to the future with 'Almost Human'

New show. "Lost" creator is back with a sci-fi/crime series.

If you adored "Alias," followed "Fringe" and couldn't get enough of "Lost," prepare for another season of addictive TV watching. Executive Producer J.J. Abrams is back with "Almost Human," a futuristic drama created by J.H. Wyman.

With his other action-packed shows "Person of Interest" and "Revolution" also on the air, how does he balance all of his plots?

"Well, one is in the future," Abrams jokes.

Actually, two are in the future if we count the post-apocalyptic, post-blackout setting of "Revolution." But we won't get technical.

"Almost Human" follows the crime-fighting duo of Detective John Kennex (Karl Urban) and his Android partner Dorian (Michael Ealy). Set in 2048, the show presents a world in which highly evolved, human-like androids are a reality in the L.A. Police Department. Kennex, who has just woken up from a 17-month-long coma, must cope with the loss of his partner and his leg from a deadly attack on the police department. He must also deal with his aversion to androids, made easier by Dorian's unexpected emotional responses.

For Wyman, it was the perfect time for a show like this. "I think the network model right now really promotes those kinds of ideas, something that is big and more popcorn-y, something that could be definitely an action-oriented program."

That relationship encompasses Abrams' production company, Bad Robot, responsible for each of his shows. While Abrams cites the synergy and collaboration between those who repeatedly work with Bad Robot, he notes that each story brought to the table is completely its own.

He has reason to get excited — critics are already praising the show and its characters. New York Times columnist Maureen Dowd compared Dorian to

Tune in to the two-night premiere of "Almost Human" on Nov. 17 at 8 p.m. on Fox. / LIANE HENTSCHER, FOX

Show themes

Technophobia

"Almost Human" will consistently address reservations about new technology.

"Kennex is a little bit worried about the advancement of technology and where that's led humanity and what the world looks like with this onslaught of new developments and unchecked growth with technology," Wyman says. "That's the journey for him, is that he's starting to realize it's not the technology that's bad; it's how you use it."

President Obama. Abrams credits his actors for the positive reception.

"I do think that what Michael Ealy brings to this role is an incredible sense of thoughtfulness and compassion," Abrams says. "He is playing a character who is, by design, literally as brave and as knowledgeable and strategic as you would want your partner to be if you were riding along as a cop. But he's also as altruistic and as considerate and empathetic as you would want. I think what Michael brings is that kind of depth, that kind of comedy and humanity."

In terms of casting, the actors had a strong influence on their characters. "We are huge fans of [Lili Taylor] — once we started talking about [her] we realized that the character of Maldonado would actually be far superior if it was a woman."

But how is "Almost Human" going to differentiate itself from all the other cop dramas on TV? "Inherently, this show is a week-to-week great action show with cases that you've never really seen before, or concepts that you have seen, but just told in very different ways, because of the nature of our program," Abrams says.

Jesus Christ — Lord or Figure-head?

"Not everyone who says to Me, 'Lord, Lord' shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he who does the will of My Father in heaven."

Matthew 7:21

Figure-heads are common in business and governments — persons who seem to be in charge, but in reality have little or no power or influence. Others decide. Sadly that is true even in Christianity. Is Christ Lord (master) in your life? ... In your church? He is our Lord only if we are in obedient submission to His will / word.

Romance abroad. LaBeouf tries for edge and only achieves 'edge'

Shia LaBeouf plays Charlie, a young man whose mother (Melissa Leo) has just died. He can also talk to ghosts (apparently). She tells him to go to Bucharest — not for any discernible reason, although possibly because it's famously cheap to shoot in. Once there, he quickly falls for Gabi (Evan Rachel Wood), the kept lover of a fearsome gangster (Mads Mikkelsen). But true love — or whatever Charlie thinks happened in the tiny amount of time he's known her — can't be stopped by good sense.

Director Fredrik Bond previously made videos for Moby. Back in the 1980s and 1990s, it was de rigueur for critics to hang directors who used to work in music videos, accusing them of making flashy, purely stylish works, all while ignoring their artistry. But Bond really is that kind of empty-headed imagist. His shots are either kinetic

Bruce Dern and Will Forte attempt to bond in "Nebraska." / PARAMOUNT PICTURES

A son-and-pop trip in God's country

Dramedy. A comic star and a film legend get stuck together while driving through "Nebraska."

In the new film "Nebraska," a 40-something stereo salesman, David (Will Forte), goes on a road trip with his cranky old dad Woody (Bruce Dern) to collect what Woody thinks is a million-dollar prize. No such prize exists; Woody has simply received one of those Publishers Clearing House letters. Hoping only to bond, David agrees to placate this delusion.

Here's what doesn't happen: David doesn't realize Woody — ignored by his verbally pugilistic wife (June Squibb) and busy older son (Bob Odenkirk) — is a paragon of decency in a cruel and indifferent world. Woody is a stubborn, mostly miserable coot who rarely talks, because he honestly has very little to say. His de facto posture is slack-jawed, staring at nothing. At the same time his silence paired with his often irrational actions suggests there's some crazy faulty wiring in his head.

Director Alexander Payne ("Sideways," "The Descendants") shoots in black-and-white, turning the Midwest into arid open spaces and buildings that resemble husks. If it looks alien and uninviting, it has a melancholic poetry to it, and not just because Payne overuses a too-plaintive score over montages of car travel. "Nebraska" is a funny movie that turns emotional, but it's one that slips in moments of unexpected depth. A brief visit to one of Woody's ex-girlfriends, still smarting from losing to the woman who became his wife, creates an entire universe we only get through implication. As with the characters it presents, "Nebraska" is deeper than it sometimes seems.

Cinema charity. Seeing '12-12-12' will literally help Sandy victims

If ever there was a critic-proof movie, it's "12-12-12," the film version of last year's mega-concert to raise money for Hurricane Sandy relief. Truly only a jerk would hurl negativity at a film whose entire box office is going directly to relief funds. But how about some mildly skeptical words?

No film that opens with Bruce Springsteen and ends with Paul McCartney reuniting what he can of Nirvana is inessential. Whittling down the show's six hours to less than two, it aims to recapture the power of the night. It doesn't — but how could it? The concert was a had-to-be-there affair — not live at Madison Square Garden, per se, but in front of a TV or staring at a live stream on your laptop while tweeting about Quentin Tarantino's Kangol hat.

Of course, "12-12-12" is still moving, and even joyful. On one hand, it features too much of the only marginally interesting setup and a stretch involving a server catastrophe. On the other, it may go down in history as the film where a rarely goofier Jesse Jackson giggles like a schoolgirl. As a movie, it's slightly better than it had to be, and that's good enough. MATT PRIGGE

Drama. An aging playboy won't stop in 'The Great Beauty'

Unfailingly chill and smirking, Jep (Toni Servillo), we're told, once wrote a fantastic book. He's been living off the acclaim for years, occasionally doing interviews but mostly lounging in his bachelor pad and staying out till dawn. He's 65.

That's pretty much it for plot: Jep wandering through a life of desiccated decadence, one that's no longer much fun but is, at least, not entirely boring. It plays like an in-spirit sequel to Federico Fellini's "La Dolce Vita," in which a young journo got sucked into Rome's jet set of the 1960s. Here, the parties are still happening, but they're less happening. And Jep, who long ago became overly comfortable, has no major realizations and only a few minor ones.

It still runs two-and-a-half hours. It is, to be frank, a bit long. The length isn't unnecessary, but even the intentional redundancies start to feel redundant. Still, this is a film meant to be savored, like a good wine or a chocolate. As he did in "Il Divo" and "This Must Be the Place" — in which Sean Penn was a bored rocker dolled up like Robert Smith — director Paolo Sorrentino depicts someone trapped in a prison of their own making. The beauty of Rome is endless. But the city is a tomb. MATT PRIGGE

Messy, but in a good way

Reunion film. "The Best Man Holiday" offers both heart and Terrence Howard going blue.

On one hand, maintaining a consistent tone in a film is impressive — a sign that the audience is in good hands. On the other hand, a messy bouillabaisse of various, even contradictory tones can make one feel more alive.

"The Best Man Holiday" doesn't necessarily make one feel sprightly. A sequel to the 1999 sleeper hit, it's a sleepy, shaggy hang-out movie, one too enamored with melodramatic clichés. But it is one that veers madly between genres — from R-rated penis jokes to shameless tear-jerking.

The build-up to a wedding in the first movie is replaced with a Christmas gathering, with the original's nine friends hunker-ing down in the sprawling manse of Morris Chestnut's Lance, now a New York Giants star. Each gets a subplot of varying significance. Will failing novelist Harper (Taye Diggs) get estranged former bestie Lance to allow him to write a book about him? And surely there's nothing up with Lance's wife Mia's (Monica Calhoun) cough.

This would be all wealth porn were it not for Terrence Howard's Quentin. Howard cruises through the movie, trying not to get involved in the more serious bits and getting the best lines. Do Howard's blue jokes fit in with a subplot that takes a turn for Kleenex-soiling tragedy? Perhaps not, but they're hugely welcome. "That was some melodramatic s—," Howard cracks after one shouty development that takes things too seriously.

"The Best Man Wedding" does have shocking reservoirs of intelligence, even nuance. Faith plays a big role, but there's not one kind of faith. Where Lance prides himself on placing God before his family, Harper takes a more skeptical view without being punished for it. It accepts that age brings disappointments — and worse. That smarts can sit with stupidity and clichés is a good thing, not bad.

No omelets, only jail time, for Genevieve Sabourin, seen here on Tuesday at court. / RAYMOND HALL, GETTY IMAGES

Alec Baldwin's stalker gets jail time

Alec Baldwin can sleep easier at night knowing his stalker is behind bars.

On Thursday, a New York City judge found Canadian actress Genevieve Sabourin, 41, guilty of stalking, attempted aggravated harassment, harassment and attempted contempt of court. She was sentenced to six months in jail.

The trial was dramatic, even by New York City standards. The two did seem to have some history: Baldwin admitted on the stand he had dinner with Sabourin three years ago at an Upper East Side restaurant but said it was to give her "career advice." She claims that afterwards, the two had sex and then "cuddled," which the "30 Rock" actor denies (both the sex and cuddling). Baldwin allegedly said, "I make the best omelets in the world and I'd be happy to make you omelets every morning for the rest of your life." He also promised her a trip to meet Richard Gere. Hello, single-girl fairy tale! But then once he met his current wife, Hilaria, the fairy tale ended. And that's when her stalking began, with frantic calls, emails and even uninvited appearances at his house.

Sabourin says she just wanted to figure out what happened. "It's not because he's rich and famous that he can take advantage of women and throw them in the garbage," she said.

The moment you've all been waiting for Entertainment Weekly has an early Christmas present for the "Fifty Shades of Grey" fans out there — a first look of Jamie Dornan as Christian Grey and Dakota Johnson as Anastasia Steele. "I'm going to do everything in my power to portray Christian Grey as truthfully as possible," said Dornan. "I can't guarantee that's going to please everyone — just me being cast doesn't please everyone — but it's happened and I'm going to give it everything."

McConaughey still plays the congas naked

MATTHEW MCCONAUGHEY
GETTY IMAGES

Matthew McConaughey's career transformation over the past two years might have something to do with realizing his public image had gotten a bit ... fluffy. "I get it," McConaughey tells GQ magazine. "Outdoors, shirtless on the beach, does a lot of rom-coms, girlfriends love him, good-looking. It's like he rolls out of bed and shows up and makes it look easy." But while he's gotten more serious in the roles he chooses, some things never change. "Of course I still play the congas naked," he says. "I just close the windows."

Obamacare is Dems' fault

Re: 'The buck stops with Congress' (Metro, Nov. 14) Letter writer D'Avia Newman's attempt to blame Obamacare on Congress is outrageous. Yes, legislation starts in Congress, and nothing gets through without both chambers' approval. But it was passed when Democrats had total control, including a filibuster-proof majority in the Senate. Republican proposals such as tort-reform and allowing purchases across state lines were dismissed. EVERY Republican voted against Obamacare. The Democrats created this mess, and the blame is entirely theirs.

JIM FLETCHER, VIA EMAIL

Keep peace with Iran

I voted for Obama in part because he said he preferred diplomacy to war. Now that talks with Iran are in process, we should do our best to use this opening. I have known various Iranians in the U.S., and they are without exception well-educated, courteous and peaceful. The world as a whole will have a better future without war.

MARY ALLEN, VIA EMAIL

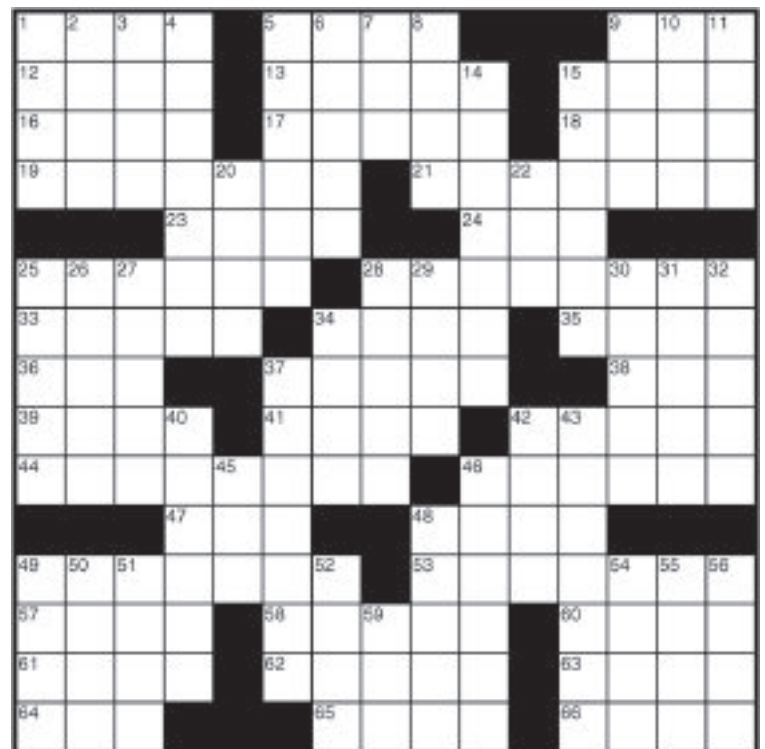

Ross is no role model

Re: 'Rick Ross: Playing no games' (Metro, Nov. 14) Metro, did you really let this one off the presses with Rick Ross being deemed a mastermind on the front page? The guy that advocates for our daughters to be raped and apologizes only after Reebok delivers him a financial hand slap? He states "I'd die over these Reeboks" right before he delivers his now infamous line, so of course he was quick to recant his statements.

Giants vs. Packers: Three things to watch

The Giants and Packers engage in a pivotal matchup for both squads, as Big Blue is looking to extend its three-game winning streak, while Green Bay looks to stay afloat in the NFC North race, sans their franchise quarterback.

Metro looks at three things to watch for in Sunday's game (4:25 p.m., FOX):

1 Feeling scared

Eli Manning has thrown an NFL-high 16 interceptions, which has led to speculation Giants head coach Tom Coughlin has consciously pulled the reins back on their once-vaunted deep passing game. The Packers have the 24th-ranked secondary, so the chances should be there for the taking.

2 Who are you?

Manning's counterpart this week is third-string quarterback Scott Tolzien. Tolzien didn't look as if the moment was too big for him last week, so the Giants shouldn't take him lightly. But the defense is feeling good after allowing just one touchdown the last 14 quarters.

3 Run option

As poised as Tolzien has looked, he's also benefitted from great play from rookie running back Eddie Lacy. If the defense is prepared for the Packers' "heavy package" of extra linemen it'll help the Giants' pass rush key on Tolzien. TONY WILLIAMS

Reed adds experience to young Jets backend

NFL. Rex Ryan feels his former Ravens safety can still play at a high level.

The Jets have played like they are playoff contenders, but in signing safety Ed Reed on Thursday they signaled they believe rebuilding is over and they are ready to contend this season.

"That was a huge factor for me, for playing this year in general. Being with a team that would contend, be in the playoffs. It's right there, we're focused on Buffalo right now, I know that for a fact," Reed said. "That's what I'm coming in here to do with these guys and just concentrate and go week to week. I know what Rex's ultimate goal is, I don't have to harp on that. I know what you play this game for, I know what he's coaching for. I'm just coming in to do my role."

In Reed, the Jets' revamped secondary gets an impact player if his aging body can keep pace. The team's top three safeties from a year ago — LaRon Landry, Jeremiah Bell and Eric Smith — were not retained and in their place the backend has gone young. Reed can help the likes of third-year safety Jaiquawn Jarrett and second-year players Antonio Allen and Josh Bush while providing some limited relief in passing situations.

But injuries have derailed Reed this year, including a nagging hip injury that has limited him to just 18 percent of the Texans' defensive snaps this season. Yet, the fact that Reed excelled in the Ravens defense under Ryan and now plays in that similar set-up with the Jets could well help him acclimate with his new teammates.

"I think when you look at the numbers, Ed was always pretty good in that system. [He] finds ways to make plays. He doesn't have to come out of the structure of the defense to make plays," Ryan said. "He certainly knows how to make plays. He knows how to set up the quarterback better than anyone I've ever been around."

For the relatively young and inexperienced Bush, there is clearly an eagerness to learn from Reed.

"That's how I introduced myself. I said, 'Mr. Reed, how you doing? I'm your shadow,'" Bush said. "He said, 'No doubt,' like he was all for it. He's a good guy."

FREE MEDICATION DOSE

New York Doctors Treat Erectile Dysfunction

BY STEVE MUELLER
Men's Health Consultant

NEW YORK • Local physicians at a new medical office in New York are so sure their medication will help men with erectile dysfunction, they are offering the first 37 callers a free in-office medication dose.

Erectile dysfunction and premature ejaculation have long been a problem for millions of men, in spite of the popularity of Viagra, Cialis and Levitra. Many men aren't helped by these pills or cannot take them due to adverse side effects.

New York Men's Medical custom blends over 180 combinations of medications for each patient. "That's why our success rate is so high," says Dr. Kevin Hornsby, M.D. and author of the book "A Doctor's Guide to Erectile Dysfunction." "We help men as old as ninety-four, with diabetes, prostate surgery and heart conditions. Regardless of their age or medical history our results everyday are amazing."

All medications are FDA approved, and no surgery is involved. "We adjust the prescription for a man's performance to 45-minutes, an hour, 90-minutes or longer," according to Dr. Hornsby, "and patients see results right in our office. After climax the patient stays erect the entire period of time. This allows them to achieve a second climax and adequately satisfy their partner. No other medication can do this. We offer a simple guarantee: If you don't respond to the medication on the first visit the office visit is free." With that guarantee, local patients have nothing to lose.

Openings are filling quickly for the free in-office medication dose, after that the normal fees will be charged. Patients see a licensed New York physician and are assured of utmost privacy and professionalism with private waiting rooms and an all male staff. Further information is available by calling (917) 675-4295.

a one-trick pony. He was an accomplished wrestler at Oklahoma State where he was a four-time All-American and a two-time National Champion.

Hendricks is steadfast in his belief that he could, quite literally, wrestle the title away should St-Pierre focus solely on eliminating his striking.

"I hope it gets overlooked, because the way I use my wrestling to get me where I'm at, I had to get people to fear my hands," Hendricks said. "And it makes my wrestling that much easier, which is great. Everything he can do, I can do."

Hendricks prepares to face legend

UFC 167. Hendricks is honored to be chosen for the title fight in UFC's 20th anniversary show this weekend.

Hendricks has eight KO or TKO wins in his 15 career victories. GETTY IMAGES

In his most private of moments, Johny Hendricks has envisioned standing inside the Octagon as Bruce Buffer announces him as the new UFC Welterweight champion as Dana White affixes the title belt around his waist.

"I have. I'm not going to lie. I have," Hendricks said of a dream that could very well become reality Saturday night, when he will face champion Georges St-Pierre for the title in the main event of UFC 167.

"I'm super stoked," Hendricks told us by phone while heading to The Palms in Las Vegas following a workout Wednesday night. "The card is so amazing. And not only that, it's the 20th anniversary, you know what I mean? ... It's very humbling that UFC picked someone like me to compete."

The reason the UFC selected Hendricks (15-1) picked to be half of the main event is simple: Hendricks has earned the title shot.

"I am as good as he is," Hendricks said. "That's the way I'm looking at it."
